TORIES FAVOUR
'SNAP' ELECTION*PRIME MINISTER NOT IN FAVOUR

London, To-day.

The announcement that compulsory military service is to be introduced is welcomed in both Parliamentary and economic circles, voices of approval being heard even in the ranks of the opposition.

Limiting of recruitment to one military class, namely to those twenty years old, is due, according to information from circles close to the Cabinet to three reasons:

- 1 The surplus equipment of the army at present is not adequate to supply more than one military class,
- 2 by recruiting only a limited number, there will be less likelihood of the industry being disturbed,
- 3 less political opposition is anticipated if a moderate beginning is made in introducing military service.

The Cabinet realise that once introduced military service can be extended to larger groups if deemed necessary.

The possibility of utilizing military service as an issue for new elections is being considered by the Conservative circles.

Mr. Chamberlain is being urged by various quarters to take this step since it is believed that military service would make an excellent election issue.

CONSERVATIVE VIEW

Reports from Conservative organisations throughout England state that the negative attitude adopted by the Labour Party does not reflect the opinion of Labour throughout the country and that Mr. Chamberlain could count upon an overwhelming victory.

The Prime Minister does not seem to be inclined to capitalise politically on the issue but informed circles intimate that should the opposition persist in treating the problem as a purely political question, Mr. Chamberlain might easily change his attitude.—Trans-Ocean.

Possible

London, To-day.

THE Government's announcement of conscription has been received with relief by the majority of M.P.'s, writes Reuter's lobby correspondent.

Already there is evidence that the Liberal section of the Opposition will make as few difficulties as possible.

Apart from the general views expressed in the House of Commons, the Labour Opposition remain non-committal pending knowledge of the scope of the Government motion to be submitted to-day.

As regards the political effect in general, the whole area of national effort has widened, and there now remains little to divide the Government from previous Conservative critics.

Consequently, it would not be surprising if Mr. Chamberlain was shortly to make changes in the direction of broadening the basis of the Cabinet.—Reuter.

Men between the ages of 20 and 21 will receive six months' training. At the end of this period they will be given an opportunity of entering the Territorials for three and a half years.

MEMEL TERRITORY AS BIG GERMAN NAVAL BASE

Fortification Work Already Started By Nazis

Yugoslav Minister And Axis

Berlin, To-day.
HITLER yesterday received the Yugoslav Foreign Minister, M. Markovitch, with whom he had a long conversation.

The Nazi Foreign Minister Herr von Ribbentrop and the Yugo-Slav Minister in Berlin, Dr. Andric, were also present.

In a statement to the press later, M. Markovitch said: "The good relations between Germany and Yugo-Slavia, which promise to develop still further in full confidence, are based on good neighbourship and mutual respect, as well as the interest of both countries."

CONFIDENCE AND TRUST

"No problem exists which cannot be dealt with in a spirit of confidence and trust by the two nations."

"The Yugo-Slav Government puts the greatest store by these relations and will continue to devote the fullest attention to them." — Trans-Ocean.

Baltic Domination Aimed At

Germany's intention of making Memel a heavily armed fortress and a naval base for the domination of the Baltic Sea is revealed in a report in the "Danziger Vorposten," the Danzig Nazi organ, which is permitted more freedom in its messages than are the newspapers published in the Reich.

The paper's correspondent reports a speech made at a reception given by Dr. Neumann, the Memel German leader, to German naval men by Capt. Fleischer, of the Reich Navy.

Herr Hitler, stated Capt. Fleischer, had resolved that Memel was to be a naval base and a fortress, of which the speaker was to be the first commandant.

STRATEGIC POSITION

According to the Danzig report, the Memel harbour is now occupied by the U-boat flotilla Weddigen, which consists of 12 vessels when at full strength, the U-boat tender Donau, 3,950 tons, and torpedo-boat destroyer T 23. Further warships are expected to arrive in Memel shortly.

"The extension of Memel to be one of the strongest fortresses in the Baltic is already in progress," the report concludes.

The harbour of Memel, which lies in a highly important strategic position in the very centre of the Baltic, commanding the sea-going approaches and exits of Leningrad, Kronstadt, Helsingfors, Stockholm, Riga, Libau and Reval, is at the moment of insufficient depth to allow of its safe use by the largest classes of warships.

DREDGING POSSIBLE

The maximum depth is between 18 and 20 ft. but this depth is inconstant and only preserved along a small channel. There seems no reason, however, why the harbour should not be dredged and deepened for naval purposes.

Memel commands the entrance to Kurisches Haff, an inland sea, which is separated from the Baltic by the Kurische Nehrung, a narrow neck of land nearly 60 miles in length.

Although the Press department of the Reich Navy declined to give any details about the future of Memel as a naval base, it seems most likely that it will be used largely as a submarine and destroyer base.

In the event of hostilities involving Germany and Russia, Memel could be used as a base for U-boats, which could prey, not only upon Russian war vessels cruising in the Baltic, but also upon any convoys of merchant vessels proceeding to or from Russian, Swedish, Estonian and Latvian ports.

In the event of Danzig changing its status, Libau, Riga and Reval might be important ports for western ocean-borne traffic with Poland.

A semi-official German message from Memel denies reports, attributed to the Polish Press, that "thousands of arrests" had been made in Memel and that concentration camps had been erected there.

Since the German seizure of Memel, it is stated, 188 persons have been arrested, of whom 135 are

NEW 14-INCH SHELL'S RANGE

The effective range of the new British 14in armour-piercing shell, as measured by the perforation of any given thickness of armour, materially exceeds that of the 15in shell. This statement was made by Major A. B. Clerk, managing director, at the annual meeting of Hadfields Ltd. at Sheffield.

Referring to profits on armaments, Major Clerk said the rate was fixed by agreement, so that all savings on costs passed automatically to the Government departments concerned by a corresponding reduction in price.

In spite of many increases in cost of materials and labour, no price of any one of the standard products had ever been increased, and in nearly every case they had been subject to a steady and continuous reduction. On hardened shells and bombs alone the saving to the Government amounted to over £300,000.

NEW STATUS OF ALBANIA

London, To-day.

The Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. R. A. Butler, stated in answer to a question regarding recognition of the new status of Albania, that no decision had been taken in the matter.

Decision could only be reached after the future of the relations between Italy and Albania as well as the internal situation in Albania had been clarified. — Trans-Ocean.

THE SOVIET UNDER-SECRETARY FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS, M. POTEKIN, HAD A TALK HERE YESTERDAY WITH THE BULGARIAN PREMIER, WHICH IS UNDERSTOOD TO HAVE BEEN OF THE GREATEST IMPORTANCE.

On his return journey, M. Potemkin intends to spend three or four days in Sofia after visiting Bucharest, the Rumanian capital.

He was very satisfied with his reception in Bulgaria. — Reuter.

CHINESE CLAIM DRAMATIC NANCHANG SUCCESS

Kaoan, To-day.

Utter confusion reigns in Nanchang as the Chinese have smashed into the city and are engaging in street fighting with the Japanese, according to field dispatches.

The streets are strewn with fallen soldiers while huge fires are reducing the city to ruins. Chinese units forced their way to the Japanese aerodrome in the eastern suburb of Nanchang and are engaging the Japanese troops there.

Lientang, key point nine miles south of Nanchang, has been abandoned by the Japanese who have been recalled to Nanchang as reinforcements.

The Japanese unit at Hsieh-fow-shih has been annihilated. Seventeen Japanese officers and soldiers were taken prisoner, and eight Japanese machine-guns were captured. A Japanese captain committed suicide when surrounded.

Kaoyukhih, between Kaoan and Nanchang, has also been regained by the Chinese.

The Chinese column counter-attacking at Fenghsin, 23 miles west of Nanchang, is pounding at the gates.

To the northwest of Nanchang, the Chinese have tightened their hold on Wuning. Fighting continues in the suburban hills. — Central News.

STILL IN CITY

Shanghai, To-day.

Vernacular reports state that Chinese forces entered Nanchang at noon yesterday and were locked in street fighting with the Japanese for several hours.

Last night, the reports added, the Chinese were still in the city and furious street-fighting continued. — Our Own Correspondent.

BRITISH REPRESENTATIONS ON TSINGTAO CONDITIONS

Discrimination Continues Against Shipping Pressure In Tokyo

London, To-day.

The Government has made representations to the Japanese Government concerning unfair discrimination against foreign vessels in respect to mooring arrangements at Tsingtao.

This statement was made in the House of Commons yesterday by the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Mr. R. A. Butler, in reply to Mr. Philip Noel-Baker (Labour, Derby).

China Winning Money War

Peiping, To-day.

FEDERAL Reserve Bank currency in North China continues to slump in terms of National currency.

From Saturday, the 17 per cent. National currency premium rose to 21 per cent. yesterday and touched a new high to-day of 25.5 per cent.

The anti-British movement continues in various parts of North China.

Japanese reports describe anti-British meetings even in Mongolia, where the chief speakers were Japanese, while foreign correspondents at Kaifeng (Honan) yesterday heard violent denunciations of Britain, France and Russia by the Japanese-appointed "governor."

NOT INVITED

It is significant that British correspondents were not invited to visit Kaifeng with German and American correspondents.

Eye-witnesses describe the "governor" as reading from a manuscript prepared on a Japanese typewriter. — Reuter.

IRELAND'S NEUTRALITY

Dublin, To-day.

General Mulcahy is expected to ask Mr. de Valera in the Dail, whether the Government of Eire has notified the British, German, Italian, French and Spanish Governments that Eire, in the case of war, would remain strictly neutral, and whether Eire had demanded from these Governments assurances that neither Irish territory nor Irish waters would be used for military purposes.

It was officially announced yesterday that Mr. de Valera on Saturday will leave by "President Harding" for New York, as the guest of President Roosevelt.

Mr. de Valera will open the Irish section of the New York world exhibition on May 14 and then visit a number of American cities. — Trans-Ocean.

Mr. Butler said the question of extension of further facilities was being taken up with Japan.

Mr. A. C. Moreing (Conservative, Preston) asked whether any report had been received from Sir Archibald Clark-Kerr, British Ambassador to China, upon the Japanese demand addressed to the Shanghai Municipal Council that the Council prohibit the display of the Chinese national flag in the Council's jurisdiction.

NO REQUEST FOR AID

Mr. Butler said no report to this effect had been received.

Any request by the Municipal Council for assistance in a matter of this sort would be carefully considered on consultation with the other interested Powers. — Reuter.

THE PACIFIC CONFERENCE, THE PROCEEDINGS OF WHICH HAVE BEEN KEPT A CLOSE SECRET, CONCLUDED YESTERDAY.

The New Zealand Prime Minister, Mr. Savage, expressed satisfaction at the exchanges of opinion to which the talks in the last ten days had given opportunity.

He announced that questions of mutual interest which had arisen during the Conference would be further discussed in informal conversations.

For this reason the British delegate, Major-General Mackay, whose return to Britain had been fixed for the first days of May, will prolong his stay in New Zealand for a few weeks. He will inspect New Zealand's coast defences. — Trans-Ocean.

NAZI ATTACK ON BRITAIN

A violently anti-British poster was displayed recently in Nazi party offices in Berlin.

Berlin never anticipated, it states, that when her army marched into Bohemia and Moravia Mr. Chamberlain would send the Fuehrer a telegram of congratulation, to express his joy that peace had been saved, this time without his travelling exertions. Germany did not, however, expect that a responsible British statesman would join in the "monstrous outcry of moral hypocrisy" set up by such people as Mr. Winston Churchill and Mr. Duff Cooper.

"After various references to British 'brutality,' the poster concludes: 'As by far the greatest people in Europe we have had enough of being made the object of British megalomania and lack of political instinct in matters on which England has no moral or political right to interfere.'

"The Fuehrer has surely done his best to leave no doubt about the limit of German patience. We shall immediately reply in the appropriate manner to any further attempts at interference."

ST. FRANCIS HOTEL
QUEEN'S ROAD, CENTRALRAID ON WANG
HING BUILDING

Late last night the Police carried out a raid in the heart of the city and took several Chinese into custody.

The raid was carried out in Wang Hing Building, No. 8, Queen's Road Central at about midnight. The persons arrested were alleged to have been engaged in gambling.

Among the arrested were four well-dressed Chinese women.

The police searched the place for over an hour.

The 24 persons found in the alleged gambling den on the second floor of Wang Hing Building, failed to appear at the Central Police Court this morning.

They had each paid bail of $5, which was ordered to be confiscated this morning by the Magistrate, Mr. R. Edwards.

Those found in the place were described as transportation company managers, brokers, teachers, gentlemen of independent means, and club-boys.

Sub-Inspector Hopkins appeared for the prosecution.

ONE TELEGRAM

ONLY

The generous surprise offer of Cable and Wireless to send a free social service telegram to all parts of the British Empire, made to local residents, appears to have been misinterpreted in some quarters.

Hundreds of telegrams have already been received by the cable company for despatch on May 1, when service is to be introduced, and several residents have sent in numerous telegrams for different addresses.

The remarkable offer made, however, does not extend quite that far. The traffic involved would be impossible to handle. Each resident is permitted to send ONE telegram free. Additional cables will be charged at the new special rate of $4 for 12 words.

There is nothing, however, to prohibit the despatch of one message by each member of a family.

Although this period could be overcome by passing a motion explicitly prolonging the validity of the clause in question, hints are given that there is no intention of doing this. — Trans-Ocean.

Accused was remanded for a week on bail of $1,500, $500 of which was ordered to be paid in cash by Mr. E. Himsforth, the Magistrate.

MR. ATTLEE ACCUSES THE PRIME MINISTER OF BREAKING A PLEDGE

London, To-day.

Loud Opposition cheers greeted Mr. C. R. Attlee, the Labour leader, when, following the Prime Minister's statement on conscription, he asked whether Mr. Chamberlain was aware that the Government's decision broke a pledge solemnly given and reaffirmed only four weeks ago. Mr. Attlee said that so far from strengthening the country, it would sow division in the ranks and would meet with strenuous opposition. (Further loud Opposition cheers and cries of "Resign.")

310,000 Men Affected

London, To-day.

THE gross number of men who will be called up for training under the Government's Bill is estimated at 310,700.

Mr. Chamberlain informed Mr. Lloyd George, whose enquiry in the Commons elicited this information, that this figure would be subject to considerable reductions.

It is estimated that the actual number to be obtained under the measure will be 200,000.

It is pointed out that the new arrangement is not undertaken in substitution for the voluntary system but rather as a supplementary assurance that the men required will be available.

Men between 20 and 21 now attested in the Territorial force will probably remain in that force, but a final decision on this is awaited.

The calling up of men will begin as soon as the Bill is passed.

MINIMUM DISLOCATION

It is understood that in selecting 20 and 21 as the ages for those to undergo training, the experts had regard to the fact that this was the least likely to interfere with individual concerns and would cause the minimum dislocation of industry. — British Wireless.

SATISFACTION IN FRANCE

Paris, To-day.

"A very great event," says the "Journal des Debats," which phrase is typical of the manner Mr. Chamberlain's announcement of conscription has been received throughout France.

"Le Temps," which reflects French official opinion, says: "To-day's decision and yesterday's Budget speech mean that Britain is throwing into the balance the whole weight of her moral and material strength in order to face the situation and to conscientiously acquit herself of her national and international duty."

The Journal adds that Germany will make a grave error if she re-

Mr. Chamberlain, replying, said: "My own conscience is perfectly clear (Cheers and counter-cheers), and I believe that when people have had to consider the circumstances in which we live, they will agree that they cannot be described as peacetime circumstances."

Replying to further questions from Mr. Attlee, Mr. Chamberlain indicated that the House would be given an opportunity to debate the subject to-day (Thursday).

NO CONSULTATION

Asked by Sir Archibald Sinclair (Leader of the Liberal Opposition) for an explanation as to why no consultations with the Opposition or representatives of organised Labour had taken place before the pledge was revised, if not abandoned, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"I assure you that if I did not consult you, this was not out of any intention of discourtesy or neglect but because events move quickly these days."

"In the opinion of the Government, many things had to be considered, and there was not time to do more than consult Mr. Attlee this morning, as well as members of the Trades Council." — Reuter.

THE STRAITS DEFENCE CONTRIBUTION

London, To-day.

The resolution of the Straits Settlement Legislative Council offering £1,000,000 towards the cost of general defence of the British Empire, was announced in the House of Commons yesterday by the Colonies Secretary, Mr. Malcolm MacDonald.

Mr. MacDonald said: "I have requested the Governor to express to the Council, His Majesty's Government's grateful acceptance of this most generous gift and warm appreciation for the sustained and practical co-operation of the Straits in sharing the costly burden of Empire defence, of which this gift is yet another example."

The reply was greeted with cheers from all sides of the House. — Reuter.

Can Hardly Call This Peacetime

MR. CHAMBERLAIN

ON CONSCRIPTION

Obvious Weaknesses Of Voluntary System

STEPS TO LIMIT PROFITS IN REARMAMENT

London, To-day.

"Broadly speaking, under the present procedure, mobilisation, whether complete or partial, could only take place after issue of a proclamation, different in the case of each Service, declaring that a state of emergency existed," stated the Prime Minister, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, explaining the conscription decision in the House of Commons yesterday.

Issue of such proclamations, he continued, no doubt was originally contemplated as taking place when an outbreak of war appeared imminent.

But in present times war might not appear imminent and yet general conditions might be so uncertain that it was desirable to take certain precautions without the publicity and shock to public confidence which would be caused by the issue of proclamations.

Accordingly, the Government has decided at once to introduce a Bill entitled the "Reserve and Auxiliary Forces Bill," which would simplify procedure and would enable the Government.

by an Order-in-Council to authorise the various Service departments to call up any class or description of the reserve and auxiliary forces.

The Bill would be temporary in character, and he hoped it would be passed without delay in order that the Government be empowered to act under it at once.

NEW LIABILITIES

Every country in Europe had powers which the Government sought under the Bill, and practically everyone availed themselves of it at one time or another to effect partial mobilisation.

The Government had given consideration also to the new liabilities which, with the approval of all quarters of the House, they had incurred in Europe within the last month and to the means at their disposal to discharge them effectively.

Mr. Chamberlain added: "I need perhaps hardly repeat that the objects of the assurances we have given to certain countries, as well as the conversations now proceeding with other governments, is not to wage war but prevent it."

"Bearing this object in mind, we cannot but be impressed with the view shared by the other Democratic countries, especially by our friends in Europe, that despite the immense effort already made by rearmament, nothing would so impress the world with the determination of this country to offer a firm resistance to any attempt at general domination, as its acceptance of the principle of compulsory military service which is the universal rule on the Continent."

OBVIOUS WEAKNESS

"There is an obvious weakness in voluntary system which allows one man to devote himself to pleasure or gain while his neighbour devotes himself to training in readiness for war.

"It is generally understood and accepted that in time of war, military service would be compulsory from the outset.

"Hitherto it had not been thought necessary to introduce such a measure in peacetime, and I renewed the pledge given by Earl Baldwin that compulsory service would not be introduced during the life of this Parliament in peacetime."

NOT PEACETIME

"We are not at war now, but when every country is straining all its resources to be ready for war, when confidence in the maintenance of peace has been undermined and everyone knows that if war is to come we might pass into it in a matter not of weeks but of hours, we cannot pretend that this is peacetime in any sense in which the terms could be fairly used."

"Under the Bill, it will be necessary to call up certain Territorial and a number of the Regular Army personnel to reinforce our system of anti-aircraft defence throughout the period of uneasiness, which may last for a considerable time yet."

GREATER SACRIFICE

"This will entail, on the part of the Territorials who are called up, a greater and more prolonged sacrifice than was anticipated when they enrolled."

"The Government has come to the conclusion that to meet these new and exceptional conditions, some measure of compulsory military training for the time being has become necessary."

"I say for the time being because I wish to emphasise that the Government's proposals, which will be embodied in a second Bill entitled the Military Training Bill, will be of a temporary character."

THREE YEARS

Mr. Chamberlain indicated that the powers given by the Bills would last three years, but these could be brought to an end by an Order-in-Council if circumstances permit.

On the other hand, they could be extended after three years for a year at a time, but only after an affirmative resolution was passed by both Houses.

—GERMANY— INFORMED

Berlin, To-day.

It is understood that the British Ambassador, Sir Neville Henderson, informed the Nazi Secretary of State of the British Government's intentions regarding conscription when the Ambassador called at the Foreign Office yesterday.—Reuter.

The Military Training Bill would be introduced in a week.

ARMAMENT PRICES

Explaining the further steps to limit profits in rearmament, Mr. Chamberlain said that departments had already exercised the greatest possible care in fixing prices to ensure that only a reasonable profit was made, but experience showed the difficulty of providing for all possible contingencies beforehand, and it was felt that definite limitation of profits was the only method of achieving the desired object with certainty.

He wished to make it clear that in the opinion of the Government, when the country was engaged in a major war, it was not the time when individuals should be increasing their fortunes out of conditions which the war created.

PROFITS TAX

It was therefore the intention, if war broke out, that legislation be enacted imposing special penalties on profiteering, and providing that any increases in profits or increases in individual wealth should be appropriately curtailed to the benefit of the State.

These proposals for marshalling Britain's defences were designed with a single object, namely to render this country able to carry out its engagements in the belief that in that way, peace in Europe could best be secured.—Reuter.

SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

Concluding, Mr. Chamberlain said: "I would point out that the proposals I have just outlined have arisen, like other steps in the marshalling of our defences, out of the sequence of events."

"The acceleration and expansion of our rearmament programme, the increase in the strength of the Territorial Army, the decision to establish a Ministry of Supply with power to secure priority for Government orders and now the proposal for compulsory training, have all been designed with one single object, namely to render this country able to carry out the engagements it has entered into in the belief that in that way the peace of Europe can best be secured."—British Wireless.

LABOUR TABLES AMENDMENT TO GOVT. MOTION

LONDON, To-day.
THE GOVERNMENT MOTION, WHICH WAS FOR THE BASIS OF TODAY'S DEBATE IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS, APPROVES COMPULSORY MILITARY TRAINING AS NECESSARY FOR THE NATIONAL SAFETY AND THE FILM OF OUR RECONSTRUCTION.

It welcomes the fact that Government is now seeking fresh powers to limit profits of armament production firms and will take steps to prevent additions to the national debt through war production.

The Parliamentary Labour Party, after a special meeting of the House of Commons yesterday, decided to put down the following amendment:

"Whilst prepared to take necessary steps to provide for safety of the nation and maintenance of its international relations, the House regrets that the Government, in breach of pledges, should have failed to provide the means needed for defence."

The Opposition tabled a similar amendment.—Reuter.

READY TO RECON PROBLEMS

Referring at question time to the House of Commons debate on relations with Germany, Mr. Chamberlain observed that the Government would not refuse to enter discussion with the German Government of all questions at between them on the condition in the view of the British Government, such a discussion held reasonable prospect of success.—Trans-Ocean.

THE DAILY SHORT STORY

HAIDEE GETS LOST

Haidee refused to ride a burro. Her eyes blazed furiously as she looked into Spence Beaton's placid face.

"Ride one of those miserable little beasts? Me?" She laughed scornfully. "Why, I—I'd look ridiculous!"

Spence Beaton, as always, was very patient, very indulgent. "Miss Tucker, a body only looks ridiculous by comparison. When there's nothing to compare with, everything looks the same. On this trip, everybody will be riding burros. Burros are a good deal more dependable than horses, especially—"

"For goodness's sake," Haidee cried, "stop philosophizing! Must you always be so practical? Why can't you let yourself go once in awhile?"

"It doesn't pay," Spence said solemnly, "to let yourself go in this country." He paused. His eyes were inscrutable. "Perhaps you'd rather not take this trip, ma'am."

The wretch! Haidee could have cried from sheer fury. How she hated this tall, quiet handsome son of the West! How she loathed him! He was too smart, too cunning. He didn't want her to take the trip to the abandoned borax mines. She was a nuisance. He was using this as a means of getting camp she whipped the burro into a run. It would be fully a half hour before she was missed. By that time she would be well away, and she knew even a genius like Spence Beaton couldn't follow the donkey's trail on the hard rock of this desert country.

Two hours later Haidee reined in her burro. A feeling of misgiving had beset her. She should have reached the prospector's cabin long ago. She had brought along no water and her throat was parched. The sun was already low in the west.

Haidee was by no means a coward, but she was a woman and she wasn't used to being alone with no one to call on for help if she needed help.

After awhile she entered a canyon where the shadows lay deep and foreboding. In sudden panic she turned the burro and headed back in the direction from which she believed she had come. The sun had dropped beneath the nearest peaks when she stopped again.

Stark terror was in her eyes. She was lost, and horribly thirsty. Her mind raced frantically, groping for some ray of hope. But there was none. She had missed the cabin. Her trail was in-rid of her, pretending to be concerned about her welfare.

She considered reporting his insolence to Walt Briggs, who owned the Maverick Dude ranch where she and her family and a party of friends were spending the winter. But she knew that wouldn't do any good. Spence was a valuable man. Walt Briggs would rather lose a half dozen guests than lose Spence Beaton. Besides, what grounds did she have, really, for complaint? And what if he were fired? What if he went away and she never saw him again?

Oh Lord, why had she ever agreed to come out to this miserable country?

When the small cavalcade set off from the ranch, heading toward the distant, mysterious-looking Funeral Mountains, with Spence Beaton at its head, Haidee was among the half-dozen guests who made up the procession. She rode a flea-bitten, lop-eared miserable little donkey and she felt ludicrous. But she laughed and was gay with the others. Indeed, she had good reason to feel gay and light-hearted, for hadn't she thought of the most brilliant plan imaginable? Hadn't she thought of a plan that would outsmart the craft, cunning Mr. Spence Beaton?

Suppose she got lost? Suppose Spence Beaton came looking for her and couldn't find her? Then what? How would he feel? How would he explain to Walt Briggs and her father and mother? Ha! She guessed that would take the starch out of him all right.

Haidee, in her rides about the ranch, had come upon the cabin of a lone prospector located at the base of a small mountain where there was a creek. She had become acquainted with the old fellow. She knew that once a month he trekked out to the town of Goldig for supplies and was gone a week or more. She had often thought what fun it would be to spend a night in his abandoned shack, alone on the desert. To-day she intended to indulge that whim.

When the cavalcade stopped for lunch Haidee unobtrusively wandered away. The moment she was out of sight of distinguishable on the rocks. Wildly, hysterically, she began to shout. The naked mountain flung back her cries in mocking tones.

All sense of bravado fled. She began to weep. Then she beat the burro furiously, and the little beast moved ahead. Pride and stubbornness gave way to bitter hopelessness. She would have given her soul for a drink of water.

Darkness had fully come when the burro finally stopped. A voice said: "Here, drink this. Take it easy now."

Haidee lifted her head. For hours, it seemed, she had been in a stupor. She knew she had been taken from the burro and that water was seeping through her lips.

She closed her eyes. Spence Beaton said: "That was pretty selfish of you. Your folks would have worried themselves sick. Lucky you were on a burro. Give a burro his head and he can find water. That's why we use 'em—just in case." He stopped. "Ma'm, the way I figure it you musta loved me danged near as much as I love you."

Haidee opened her eyes. Spence Beaton bent to kiss her, while her arms crept around his neck.

Thousands Of Bales Now At Post Office

Canton, To-day.

The shipment of silk from Canton to Hong Kong by parcel post, which reached considerable proportions recently, has been stopped by the Japanese authorities.

The ban will remain in force, according to the Japanese Consul-General, Mr. K. Okazaki, as long as the Pearl River remains closed to trade.

U.S. OFFER TO BUY DUTCH COLONIES

Amsterdam, To-day.

The Netherlands Government is taking steps to ascertain how many subjects eligible for military service are living in Dutch Guiana and Caracao, it is reported in the "Telegraaf."

The best manner of employing them for defence of these colonies is also being deliberated.

The introduction of compulsory service is not planned.

Reason for the steps is believed to be the proposal in the American Congress that both colonies be purchased by the United States.—Trans-Ocean.

PROMOTIONS IN FRANCE

Paris, To-day.

The Chief of the General Staff of the French army, General Gamelin, and the Chief of the General Staff of the Air Force, General Vuillemin, are to be promoted to the rank of Marshal and the Commander of the Fleet, Vice-Admiral Darlan, is to be given the rank of Admiral, it is reported by the "Paris Soir."

The paper declares that these promotions are to be made in order that French officers shall hold the same rank as the military leaders of foreign armies and navies.—Trans-Ocean.

Mr. Okazaki said that silk had been shipped in such large quantities recently that over $1,000,000 worth passed through the Post Office in about 50 days.

As this might be interpreted as re-opening of the river to trade, because the silk had to be carried out of Canton either on board Japanese transports or in the fortnightly British steamer to Hong Kong, the Japanese authorities had decided to impose the ban.

Meanwhile, silk exporters are worrying as to what will happen to the thousands of bales lying in the post office here — whether they will be returned to the senders and the postage cost refunded or will just be left to rot.—Reuter.

NO COMMUNIQUE EXPECTED

Berlin, To-day.

No further communique on the Yugo-Slav conferences is expected. Complete silence is being maintained regarding the results of the conferences, attention being merely directed to the communique in which it was stated that both countries are in an "extensive agreement in the attitude towards the problems relating to both nations".

Satisfaction prevails in the German political circles who declare that the negotiations have resulted in a close co-operation of Yugoslavia with the axis powers and in an understanding with Hungary.—Trans-Ocean.

Belgrade, To-day.

Negotiations between the Premier, Dr. Cvetkovitch and the leader of the Croat opposition, Dr. Matschek, have been successfully concluded.

Uncertainty still exists regarding the reorganisation of the Cabinet.

It is, however, believed, probable that Dr. Matschek will enter the Cvetkovitch Cabinet as Vice-Premier and that two or three portfolios will be given the Croats.—Trans-Ocean.

CONSCRIPTION

Announcement of the Government's decision to introduce a modified form of compulsory military service came as no surprise, in itself. Feelers put out in the last few weeks, and intensified last week-end, in the way Governments have of doing these things, undoubtedly provided Mr. Chamberlain with an eminently satisfactory answer and, despite the National Council of Labour, no cogent reason for delay remained.

Except one. And that seems to us to be the most significant factor in the Cabinet's decision.

The diplomatic situation, as seen by the Prime Minister during the week-end, clearly recommended the use of Britain's assent to the principle of conscription, as a bargaining weapon in peace pressure upon Herr Hitler. Two days before Herr Hitler's speech, when its effect one way or the other could have been observed, the Cabinet was suddenly called together and decided to act at once.

Many explanations are, of course, possible. The rebuff to Sir Neville Henderson may have been an influence, though it is open to doubt whether Ministers, in times like these, would show their displeasure by a step which is just as complete a reversal of the traditions of British policy as was the decision to undertake specific military commitments in Eastern Europe.

The true reason for anticipating Herr Hitler's reply is more likely to be found in the receipt in Downing Street of information revealing that the threat had no bargaining value and that instant action was likely to achieve more.

It means, on this basis, not only that the British people are willing to accept their responsibilities, but that there is a sense at Nos. 10 and 11 that those responsibilities are not likely to be lessened by Hitler's reply to President Roosevelt.

The Budget

The Budget really offers little for comment or criticism. Such surprises as were contained in Sir John Simon's recital of Government finances, present and future, were conditioned by the decision, reached subsequently to his original defence bill estimate of £580,000,000, to increase the Territorial Army establishment by approximately 185,000 men.

Defence expenditure thus raised to £630,000,000, and still taking no account of conscription costs, the Chancellor of the Exchequer found himself compelled to look round for new sources of revenue to the tune of £24,000,000 more than he expected six weeks ago, and he appears to have done his best to distribute the total fairly evenly between direct and indirect taxation. The increase in the h.p. tax is calculated to arouse the A.A. and the R.A.C., not to mention manufacturers, to a gesture of, maybe, despair at the injustice of it all, but no-one ever welcomed new taxation and the decision to leave income tax undisturbed is a stabilising and consolatory factor for those people in a position to afford cars.

On the whole, Sir John Simon may be credited with having done a fair job of a task unlikely to add to the popularity of any Chancellor of the Exchequer. His main aim now, as Sir Archibald Sinclair pointed out, must be to see that the defence expenditure, representing more than half the full total, is economically administered and spent so as to produce the maximum concrete results. Were that wholly assured, few would cavil at the weight of the burden.

Generalisation

The Chairman of the Urban Council appears to have developed the knack recently of treading upon corns. This time they are ours.

The "China Mail" (and it is not alone in this) has not concerned itself in the slightest with the controversy raised concerning the letting of stalls in the new Central Market. Our view, from the beginning, has been one approving, in principle, the proposal for closed and open tendering. It has seemed to us just and logical that priority letting should be the right of former stall-holders who were compelled to move to temporary stalls at the Western Market when the old Central Market was pulled down. Our only surprise was that the privilege was withheld from the fruit and vegetable section.

That, nevertheless, did not prevent the Chairman of the Urban Council from an all-inclusive accusation of unnecessary sensationalism against the local Press at Tuesday's meeting. This charge of "sensationalism" is the easy retort of all who find themselves involved in undesired publicity, and it is particularly provoking when the facts plainly reveal the newspapers concerned to be acting, in their considered opinion, in the public service. If they should be mistaken, nothing should be easier than to prove them so, without unnecessary invective.

We would ask the Chairman of the Urban Council to note that the newspapers have a public duty just as he has himself. We would particularly ask him to note that our criticism is not directed at Government servants in general. That reminder covers our special grievance at this moment. When Mr. Todd feels he has "a bone to pick" perhaps he will, too, in future, be specific. That is the only manner of approach which will elicit an irresponsible paper where the charge can truthfully be said, and from the viewpoint of the Press, the most likely to enhance its pres-

U.S. WATCHES FOR EQUAL SACRIFICE

Washington, To-day.

Comment on British conscription is reserved, and will probably be largely withheld until it is seen how the British electorate and the Dominions react.

Mr. Neville Chamberlain's justification for introducing conscription in peacetime on the grounds that the present is not peacetime, will doubtless be weighed against the efforts he will make to ensure equal sacrifice by all classes.

Nazis On War Psychosis

Berlin, To-day.

THE introduction of compulsory military service in Great Britain forms the subject of lengthy articles in the German press.

The opinion is unanimous, as might be expected, that the measure has been inspired by the hope of bringing pressure on Berlin prior to Hitler's speech and of making an impression on the smaller States.

The "Nachtausgabe" observes that Germany is less impressed by the diplomatic measures of the "encircling Powers" than by the light-heartedness with which the Democratic nations accept the sacrifices imposed on them by the war psychosis of their governments.

It affirms that Germany will continue unflinchingly to pursue "her policy of securing her indispensable living space" without regard to manoeuvres directed against the Axis. — Trans-Ocean.

REGARDED AS GESTURE

German comment is that Mr. Chamberlain's statement disposes of the theory that Sir Neville Henderson brought back a threat of conscription in order to influence Germany, as it was introduced without waiting the outcome of Sir Neville's visit to the German Foreign Office, whom Sir Neville informed of the decision.

It is argued that conscription in Britain cannot quickly become a factor of military importance, and must be regarded as a gesture.

The press describes the decision as "a feeble threat which fails to impress Germany." — Reuter.

PUBLIC ADDRESS BY EUGENE CHEN

Mr. Eugene Chen, former Foreign Minister of China, addressed undergraduates of the Ling Nam University yesterday, on the invitation of the Dean, Mr. Li Yinlin.

Mr. Chen's address was on "The Obligations And Duty Of Youth In The National Crisis."

The American press has lately stressed alleged British profiteering in rearmament and A.R.P.

Congress at present is strongly gripped by various measures to "take the profit out of war" and to conscript capital as well as manpower in the event of war.

It is widely presumed that Britons will demand similar measures in the interests of equality. — Reuter.

LONDON, TO-DAY.

The fullest information was also communicated to the Government of France and the United States.

Acting on instructions from London, Sir Neville Henderson, British Ambassador in Berlin, called on Herr von Weizaecker, Secretary of State at the German Foreign Office, and as an act of courtesy conveyed to him an outline of Britain's manpower proposals together with a statement of the reasons, which, in the opinion of the British Government, render such decisions necessary.

A similar intimation was conveyed to the Italian Government by the British Charge d'Affaires, who called at the Italian Foreign Office in Rome. — British Wireless.

AUSTRALIAN DEFENCE POLICY

Canberra, To-day.

Outlining the Australian Government's defence policy yesterday, the new Premier, Mr. R. D. "Mindful of it, I look forward to the day when we shall have a concert of pacific powers in the Pacific in both senses of the word.

Cold Shoulder For British Ambassador In Berlin

PREMIER REFUSES TO SEE IT AS SUCH

London, To-day.

Questioned in the House of Commons yesterday whether Sir Neville Henderson (our Ambassador in Berlin) would interview Herr von Ribbentrop (Nazi Foreign Minister) before Hitler's speech on Friday, Mr. Chamberlain said the Ambassador had been received by Dr. Weizsacker, of the German Foreign Office, in the morning.

It was impossible, said Mr. Chamberlain, to arrange an interview with Herr von Ribbentrop. Doubtless Sir Neville Henderson would use his discretion about seeking a subsequent interview with Herr von Ribbentrop.

Mr. F. J. Bellenger (Labour) alluded to rumours that Herr von Ribbentrop was unable to see Sir Neville Henderson because he hadn't the time to spare, and asked whether that was not a direct affront to the British Ambassador.

Mr. Chamberlain thought it unnecessary to make that assumption, and he understood that Herr von Ribbentrop had been engaged on account of the visit of M. Markovitch, the Yugo-Slav Foreign Minister.

AMBASSADOR'S MESSAGE

Replying to a query whether our Ambassador had an important message to deliver, the Prime Minister said he had not been instructed to make any suggestions or proposals to the German Government.

"We thought it right in present circumstances," said Mr. Chamberlain, "that he should be at his post to keep Germany informed of developments in British foreign policy." — Reuter.

FRENCH MESSAGE?

Paris, To-day.

Prior to his departure from Paris for Berlin, the French Ambassador, M. Coulondre, had a long discussion with M. Bonnet.

It is not known whether M. Coulondre was entrusted with a message from the French Government to Herr Hitler. — Trans-Ocean.

WILL NOT BE RECEIVED BY RIBBENTROP

Berlin, To-day.

That Sir Neville Henderson will not be received von Ribbentrop during the next few days, is regarded in political circles as certain, nor it is known when the French Ambassador M. Coulondre, who arrived in Berlin yesterday morning, will be received.

Informed circles here attach slight importance to the visit of Sir Neville to the Foreign and to the message he delivered.

He is said to have announced the British Government's intention of introducing compulsory military service and to have made several statements regarding British Foreign policy.

ON TACT

British press reports regarding the alleged intention of the British Government to send a message of warning to the Reich Government through Sir Neville Henderson and Mr. Chamberlain, in the subject of an article by Dr. Goebbels in Voelkischer Beobachter, entitled "A Few Words On Tact."

Dr. Goebbels declares that Britain is often tactless, this being usually the case with rich people.

What, asks the Reich Propaganda Minister, would Englishmen say if German papers were to print stories to the effect that the German Ambassador was returning to his post in London with instructions to present a warning to the King of England or to make representations to the British Government in an attempt to exert influence on its decisions?

COLD SHOULDER

Or what would an Englishman think if the German Ambassador were to inform the British Foreign Secretary that unless England made a change in her policy and gave assurances of her peaceful intentions, Germany would adopt a radical policy?

"It must be admitted," says Dr. Goebbels, "that London would adopt a loud tone and British public opinion would become quite angry. And rightly so."

Such tactics are tactless, stupid and impudent. And when England adopts them with us, they are out of all proportions to the comparative strength of the two nations.

"Germany does not intend to tolerate such a treatment any longer," he declares and adds "when anyone wounds our national pride we show them the cold shoulder." — Trans-Ocean.

FRENCH TALKS IN POLAND

Great importance is attached by French newspapers to the talks which M. de Montie, the French Minister for Public Works, is conducting with various members of the Polish Cabinet during his visit to Warsaw.

The fact is stressed that that he had a lengthy conference with Marshal Ryde-Smigly, Chief of the Polish General Staff.

He is said to have discussed with the Marshal the various aspects of military cooperation between the two countries in the event of war. — Trans-Ocean.

AMERICA'S PROBLEM SAME AS BRITAIN'S

America is facing the same population problems as Britain. Elementary schoolchildren in the United States number 1,573,000 fewer to-day than ten years ago. There are now 20,565,000 compared with 22,138,000 in 1929.

In another ten years there will be another million fewer. At the same time, the army of people aged sixty-five and over will continue to increase. . . . These are facts from Washington statistics. America's peak population should be reached in 1960 (between 140,000,000 and 160,000,000).

In Britain the decline has been steady, although not so sharp. But schoolchildren are, however, 1,000,000 fewer than in 1913, our present total being only 4,392,000.

BOOK REVIEW BY H.N. BRAILSFORD

THE TRUTH AB

Empire or Democracy? A study of the Colonial Question, by Leonard Barnes. (Gollancz, 7s. 6d.; Left Book Club choice, to members, 2s. 6d.)

SINCE J. A. Hobson wrote his classical study of British Imperialism, no book on this subject has appeared that ranks in importance with this volume by Mr. Leonard Barnes.

There are chapters in it written with moving eloquence that show a wide sweep of thought. There are others that dissect the economic and political realities of native life in Africa, which the most complacent reader will find disturbing, for their data admit of no question.

The constructive chapters that outline a policy are no less unflinching and courageous, though they may not fully convince every reader who accepts Mr. Barnes's outlook.

The purpose of the book is to survey the dependent empire at a moment when the claim for the return of the German colonies has put it morally and politically on the defensive.

What, to begin with, is its place in our national life? The picture has changed fundamentally since the pre war period. At the present low level of native consumption, alike in India and Africa, it is no longer an indispensable market. Mr. Barnes believes that the whole dependent empire absorbs only 2 per cent. of the total produce of British industry.

The export of capital that was the salient feature of the great period of imperial expansion has ebbed for the British Empire as a whole; until in comparison with the last pre-war years it now stands in the ratio of 3 to 7, and capital is, in fact, being repatriated more rapidly than it is sent out.

The whole income from past investments in the dependent empire is in the region of £38,000,000, which is slightly less than 1 per cent. of our total national income. This may be enjoyed by a class that exerts great political influence, but it is a negligible factor in the economic life of England.

SOCIAL PULL

On the other hand, as Mr. Barnes puts it, the dependent empire does enable large numbers of middle-class people to lead upper-class lives. There are about 200,000 employees, official and unofficial, in the dependent empire, who together reinforce the middle-class income group at home to the extent of about 10 per cent.

This social pull of the dependent empire is clearly, then, more important than its significance either as market or field of investment. It is primarily what James Mill called it, a system of outdoor relief for the governing class.

The picture Mr. Barnes draws of colonial Africa will startle no one who has read the books of Dr. Norman Leys on Kenya, but it is continental in its sweep. The historical chapters are the least successful, but the general picture is well drawn.

Some of the more salient cases of exploitation deserve to be quoted. Thus the copper mines of Northern Rhodesia export this metal to the value of £12,000,000 annually. Of this £5,000,000 goes to dividends asaland derive from it an annual income of £1,000 each, while 33s. of annual income falls to each of the 120,000 natives.

Behind such instances of exploitation lies the picture of a society slowly disintegrating. The population is facing decline more rapidly than our own, for the annual increase averaged over twelve colonies is only 0.3 per cent. against 0.45 per cent. in England.

This is explained partly by the terrific infant mortality, but also by the constant drain of male migratory labour to mines and plantations. That, again, has its cause in the deliberately crushing direct taxation—for example, £1 a head out of an average native income of £3 in British East Africa.

From this cause and also on the concentration upon crops for export, there results a too frequent condition of malnutrition, aggravated by the easily preventable disease of hookworm.

While the new apparatus of quasi-European government saps the social consciousness of the natives, it gives them in social services only the most meagre compensations.

One would like to see placarded on every hoarding the table in which Mr. Barnes exhibits all the educational opportunities, official and unofficial, however elementary, that reach the children of the various African colonies in proportions that vary from something under five per cent. to a startling maximum (in Basutoland) of some thing under sixty per cent. The average is nearer the lower end of the scale.

POLICY OUTLINED

I must leave the reader to enjoy for himself the powerful and eloquent argument by which Mr.
Barnes contends that Fascist Imperialism and our own rest on the same principle. He opposes equally any suggestion of sharing out with the Have-nots our property in human lives and any stone-walling policy of defending what we have got.

There follows one of the boldest plans I have ever read for liquidating the dependent empire. Mr.
Barnes rightly sees India as the central problem. If once we had honestly conceded self-determination there we should have begun to put ourselves right with the world and our own conscience.

That involves, needless to say, a complete shift in the balance of real power at home. But I am inclined to think that he underestimates the military danger of the Fascist conquest of an independent India.

It would be worked, not by frank invasion, but by disintegration from within followed by non-intervention.

Again, twenty years seems to me a brief schooltime in which to train all the African colonies for independence. It ought to be done, I think, in spite of his warnings, on an international plan.

Disinterested trading concerns which would hand over all profits for African development may be one line of solution. The creation of an International Civil Service which would include qualified Africans may be another. But such qualifications do not detract from the merits of one of the ablest and bravest books of our generation.

Beauty and You

CLEVER EYE MAKE-UP PERMITS YOU MANY COLOURS

Paris cables "colour for Spring." New York takes up its echo. New Fashions promise to be the gayest and most colourful with no limit to the shades or tones you might wear.

To those of you who feel that only one particular colour is becoming, this is not good news. You shudder to think of introducing several bright colours in your new wardrobe. You think, perhaps that because you have blue eyes, that you should wear only tones of blue. And in a way you are right.

Wearing the colours which compliment your eyes is usually a good rule to follow. But with the new eye make-up available you can create the illusion of having, green eyes, blue eyes, hazel eyes or any colour you wish. This is done by blending a shadow, which is shiny, on your eyelid and then dressing up to it!

NEW EYE LIPSTICKS AVAILABLE

One of the most convenient eye make-up gadgets available is a baby lipstick — an intriguing little device which enables you to apply eyeshadow conveniently and quickly. Six nicely blended shades, and natural, are yours from which to choose. If you have two or three shades you can play around a lot with your eyes and get some interesting effects.

TRY THESE

If you are the type who felt you could never wear a soft yellow green, for instance, in spite of the fact that you have a rich colouring, you should shadow your eyes with the green shade and see what happens! I'll bet you could get away with the lovely new colour.

CLEVER EYE MAKE-UP

In making up your eyes, experimenting will teach you that with a natural base (similar to vaseline) you may blend in another shade of eyeshadow so that it will be almost imperceptible but will give your lids a lustrous appearance, and will key up with the colour you want to wear. And the result is more than flattering.

LITTLE SHADOW DURING DAYTIME

very exotic type. The other shades should be used very sparingly when you wish to wear them in the broad daylight—but you may wear them much more intensely when you dress up for an evening party!

You may also like the coloured mascaras for your lashes but I personally like either the dark brown, blue or black. And I like to see even those colours used sparingly!

FOR BOILED HAM

TWO sticks of horseradish, finely grated, grated rind and juice of two oranges and one lemon, 2 oz. red currant jelly, a little castor sugar, one tablespoonful best white wine vinegar, little mustard and salt.

Mix all well together and serve with hot boiled ham.

ONE pint cream, 4 tablespoonfuls mustard, 1/2 cupful sugar, 2 egg yolks, 1 teaspoonful flour, 1 cupful cider vinegar.

Heat cream in double boiler, add sugar. Dissolve mustard in a little cream saved from the pint, add beaten yolks and add to warm mixture with half teaspoonful salt. Stir for two or three minutes, then add one teaspoonful flour and lastly the vinegar. Boil.

What The Stars Foretell

By MARY BLAKE

Competition, in every line of human endeavour, is apt to be exceptionally keen this day. An excessive amount of energy may make the average person restless, and perhaps act in a very aggressive manner. You will display good judgment if you make up your mind not to permit trifling details to upset your disposition, for they may be the cause of most of the day's aggravations. You may want to have your own way in some matter this day, and you may find that a conciliatory manner, combined with a tactful suggestion, is liable to be most helpful. The average person is likely to be very susceptible to flattery and you perhaps will have occasion to use some of it adroitly. If you do, your personality may help you greatly in a social way, but if you give in to a temptation to appear lackadaisical, there is danger of your prejudicing someone against you. Married and engaged couples, as well as those whose ardent love is fully reciprocated, will do well to remember that feelings can be easily hurt this day.

If a woman and April 27 is your birthday, you cannot afford to harbour hatred or grudges, for they may have a bad physical reaction. You should not get into the habit of expressing yourself too vigorously, for this is how many persons born on this date make enemies. Your worldly possessions, including stocks, bonds and monies seem to be coming principally through inheritance or some strange stroke of good fortune. Family, social welfare worker, teacher, newspaper woman or secretary you ought to be able to make a gratifying record. You ought to possess the attributes needed to make marriage a huge success.

The child born on April 27, requires a loving but firm hand, as well as encouragement and good to advice, to start it off right. Often decidedly talented, a splendid career is awaiting this youngster.

The mentally sketchy girl friend wonders why it is said the voice of Spring is bright and gay when everybody's feeling indifferent to the world in general.

Is Repetition Necessary To Good Teaching?

"If I've told you once, I've told you a dozen times." This remark is not infrequently made, in schools and out of them, and for every time it is said, it is probably even more frequently in the thought of the exasperated teacher who feels that he has really shown quite exemplary patience and teaching skill with no result whatever.

Is it possible that if the "telling" had been done only once it might have been remembered, without occasion for the useless repetition? One of the most interesting points made by Miss Charlotte Mason, the founder of the Parents' National Educational Union, was that a child should be told or read a story only once, and that he could on this basis be trained to a very high degree of retentiveness.

Every teacher is exposed to the danger of talking too much and of repeating things "ad nauseam," with the laudable intention of seeing that no child has missed anything.

REPEATING MAY BE A HABIT

Not long ago an after-dinner speaker began by saying, "As there may be some of you who have not heard this story..." "There," said my neighbour, "that man's a school-master. Now, a man of another profession would have had the delicacy not to tell a story some of this guests might have heard!" I promptly countered with a spirited defence of my profession, but not without an uneasy feeling that the enemy had scored a point. Which of us has not heard children (and even grown-ups) say "What?" before the question was well finished, expecting and knowing that laziness would be rewarded by its repetition.

A tendency to this failing should receive attention in class, and the teacher who explains to his pupils the value of "saying a thing once" may expect their eager co-operation, for children love efficiency, and they can easily see how this kind of retentiveness leads to it.

If we are to be successful in our "saying once," we must be careful to start each lesson well. In the modern school one class succeeds another with only a few minutes' interval. It is easy for a teacher, eager to begin on his subject matter, to forget that a moment spent in adjusting his group of pupils to the new work to be done is a wise preliminary. The quiet pause before beginning, the collecting up, with the eye, of all pupils in the room, the question about books materials required—all these help to bring the child gently into the new atmosphere to which he must now adjust himself, and nothing can be more relevant to the alert retentiveness we are seeking.

ORDERS CLEAR, SIMPLE, AND ESSENTIAL

I have said that children love efficiency. When they see it, they will respect it; and this respect for their work or our methods will be enhanced by our seeing to it that such orders as we give are clear, simple, and essential. It is the more able children who probably suffer most from the excessive number of orders and the repetition to which they have to listen while a point is being pressed home for the slower members of the group. We must do everything we can to save them from the boredom this may induce, and which is so dangerous because it dulls the fine edge of curiosity, the essential to all learning.

Finally, what teacher has not had the joy of finding that something which no amount of effect succeeded in instilling by direct methods, had soon after been grasped indirectly.

TO CRISP ONIONS

PEEL some large onions and cut them across in slices about one-eighth inch thick. Separate the rings and pass them through milk, and then flour.

Shake off the surplus flour by means of a sieve or the frying basket. Fry in deep fat till golden, remove and drain. Just before serving place the onions in the frying basket and plunge for a moment in the smoking hot fat. Remove, drain in a cloth, and serve. The onions will be beautifully crisp.

Soft Bolero Suit With Blouse

Isn't this a charming fashion? And it's one of the season's most important—a bolero suit, done in the soft, very feminine manner that is smartest of all!

The suit skirt is gracefully full; the bolero is short, with smart rounded fronts and puffed sleeves. Thin wool, silk print, flat crepe and shark-skin are good materials for the bolero suit. The blouse will be pretty in mull, batiste, chiffon or silk crepe.

HALWA

HALF-LB. semolina, preferably wheat semolina; ½ lb. granulated sugar; ½ lb. butter or good margarine; a few pieces of cinnamon and a few cardamoms; 3oz. almonds, blanched and sliced; 3oz. sultanas.

Make a syrup of the sugar and set it aside. Brown the semolina and set aside.

Melt the butter and in it fry the semolina. Add the spices, after which put in almonds and sultanas, stirring well. Last of all, add the syrup and continue to cook and stir until it thickens and leaves the pan.

While still hot pour into buttered moulds. A sprinkling of powdered cinnamon may be added.

MARKSMEN FIGHT 'PHANTOM' ARMY: NEW SYSTEM OF ARMS TRAINING

Experts in weapon training at the Small Arms School at Hythe, Kent, are responsible for turning out officers and non-commissioned officers as technicians under a new system, designed to offer the most effective opposition to the new machines of which the modern army is now composed.

Until recently the Short Magazine Lee-Enfield was the principal arm of the infantry soldier and his training was confined, for the most part, to the stationary target, with the bull's-eye as aiming mark.

As though to see that the rifleman was not called on to exercise his mind and thereby enhance his value in the field, ranges were accurately measured and clearly marked. It was, of course, a state of affairs far removed from Service conditions.

BULL'S-EYE ABANDONED

The bull's-eye, except for preliminary instruction in aiming, has now been abandoned for a progressive system of weapon-training to give the soldier a wider experience of near-war conditions, familiarise him with the action and movement of the various arms and generally to instruct him in the best method of engagement.

Training includes not only steady and accurate fire, deliberate and rapid, at ranges to be judged, but minor tactical exercises. These in turn include fieldcraft. Individual initiative on the selection of targets and how best to deal with them is encouraged.

LANDING IN MINIATURE

On appointed days a mobile army is represented in miniature as having effected a landing. The whole training machinery, and personnel can be seen at work.

There are snipers using rifles fitted with telescopic sights; camouflaged stalkers with the 5.5 anti-tank rifle menacing approaching armoured fighting vehicles; and platoons with their mortars dropping bombs behind earthworks.

There are also light machine-gunners spraying the field with bullets and thinning the ranks of advancing infantry; riflemen throwing grenades; and Bren gunners from a tripod very like a music stand, throwing, with hosepipe effect, tracer bullets at an aeroplane target.

BATTLE PICTURE

The coastal range presents an animated battle picture with its tactical surprises. Silhouettes represent advancing sections of infantry. Other specially-designed targets on wheels, cable controlled, depict armoured fighting and other vehicles advancing head-on or obliquely against the defenders.

The phantom army is brought to life by a system of levers and cables. The defenders receive valuable training from the surprise movements and the different type of targets to be engaged.

The mark which the rifleman must hit in war is seldom seen clearly or for long. Hence the need for steady and accurate shooting, and snap shooting at targets which appear only at short and irregular intervals.

In future the soldier is not to be merely a pumper of lead. He must use common sense and act more on his own initiative.

EDEN: "UNITE TO RESIST"

"The events of the month, by their stark and sudden tragedy, have imposed their lesson on all statesmen," said Mr. Anthony Eden in a broadcast to Australia.

"There is now universal agreement on the peril confronting us all, a peril based on the tyrannical abuse of power in this smash-and-grab new world.

"For some Powers force is the only determining factor of policy, and while such a state of mind exists no course is left to peace-loving nations but to unite in resistance to further aggression."

FAMOUS U.S. FLIER MARRIED

Mr. Clyde Pangborn, the American airman who made the first non-stop flight across the Pacific, was married recently at Southampton register office to Miss Swana Beauchaire Duval, a dress designer, daughter of the late M. Henri Duval, head of a Paris insurance company.

Prof. E. Schaefer, of Cunliffe-owen Aircraft Ltd., Southampton, for which Mr. Pangborn is carrying out important test flights, was best man. Mr. and Mrs. Pangborn will make a honeymoon trip to South America later in the year.

The couple met at St. Moritz at

LOST SECRET PLAN OF MUNITIONS WORKS

A man has been questioned, following investigations by Scotland Yard, Lancashire County Police and Government officials into the loss of a secret plan from the Government's £12,000,000 munition factory at Euxton, near Chorley, Lancs, three weeks ago.

The plan was missed from an office, and its disappearance was regarded so seriously that officials of M.I. 5 at Whitehall went to the munition factory to make inquiries. Scotland Yard officers took fingerprints of a number of people and inquiries were made in London, Manchester, Chorley and Bolton.

Evidence has now been lodged with the Public Prosecutions Department.

The Chinese-American Institute of Cultural Relations is organising a branch institute in Hong Kong. A telegram from Dr. H. H. Kung, President of the Institute, has been received by Dr. C. T. Wang, Mr. Y. M. Chien, and Mr. P. K. Chu, expressing hearty approval. The institute will convene a meeting of the promoters next week.

Christmas, 1937, when Mr. Pangborn went to the assistance of Miss Duval, who had got into difficulties while skiing and landed in a snowdrift.

LAWN BOWLS NOTES

PROSPECTS OF VARIOUS JUNIOR CLUBS DISCUSSED

K.B.G.C. Strong Challengers In Second Division

WEALTH OF TALENT AVAILABLE AT KOWLOON F.C.

(By "SKIP")

Saturday next, the opening day of the lawn bowls season, will see new records established as far as the number of players participating is concerned.

Whereas last season saw 288 players turn out each week, this year no less than 312 will represent the 26 teams which have entered the Leagues.

There were to have been 27 teams, but as is generally known, Hong Kong Football Club has withdrawn its "B" team from the Second division, in which all clubs will now have a match each Saturday. In the other two divisions, on account of the odd number of teams, one will have to rest each Saturday.

Owing to favourable weather conditions in 1938 several friendly matches were played prior to the opening of the League season and an impression of enthusiasm was given which, for contrary reasons, has been lacking so far this year.

These preliminary games do much to whet the appetites of bowling fans, in addition to serving as a more than useful guide to the selectors and those who, like myself, seek an indication of current form and prospects.

In my recent notes in the "Sunday Herald" I dealt as fully as possible with the First Division of the League, and have little to add: one omission I did make, however was in not mentioning the return from leave of Frank Goodwin who played such a great game in '37 and also, incidentally, in the successful Esplen Cup match at Wanstead last year. His presence will do much to make up for the losses in playing strength, which my previous notes indicated.

In the Second League, Kowloon Bowling Green Club, runners-up last year, should have a good season as several experienced players such as Armstrong, Meyer and Phillips, all of whom are erstwhile First Division men will be turning out for them.

Serious Contenders

I have little information concerning the personnel of Craigengower, teams in any division but understand that both A. M. Omar and I. C. R. Souza will be seen in the Second League this year. Their presence should make this team very serious contenders for honours.

Taikoo Dock, who won exactly half their games last year may look forward to an equally successful season this year although Dick Keown and S. J. Pollock will be away on holiday and Willie Brown has retired, both J. C. Chalmers and W. Cunningham are again available, whilst Bob Wallace, as hard a nut to crack as ever there was, will turn out should the necessity arise.

I am told that there are a lot of very keen youngsters at King's Park so some of the old Club de Recreio players will have to look to their laurels if they hope to retain their places.

Hong Kong Football Club's "A" team which, incidentally, finished below the "B" men last year, have lost the services of F. H. Glovers who has left the Colony, Jack Rodger, one of their skips now in Shanghai and George Duncan who is not playing League bowls this year.

I believe Walter Gill, of "cut yourself a piece of cake" fame is also having a season off as is Jan Tuck also of the "B" team and I have no doubt that the absence of these key men, caused the Club to make their decision to play only one team in this League.

Regrettable Decision

The decision is a regrettable one and being made less than a week before the commencement of the League season, must have proved a source of embarrassment to the officials of the Association, to whom my sympathy goes out.

Police Recreation Club, to give it the full title, expect to have about the same strength as last year whilst time alone will tell if the Civil Service team will prove more successful than their representatives last year.

The newcomers to this section of the league, Kowloon Football Club, will be all out to prove that their promotion was fully justified.

Very few clubs have as much new talent available, whilst most of the old stalwarts, Joe Gibson, W. V. Field, Tommy Fergusson, Vic Chittenden, V. Petherick and

Dr. Smalley, to mention but a few, are all available.

Bob Hall, the old interporter will be able to play in the first few games of the season as will C. Champelovier, but a useful player in Turney has left for good and K. C. Hamilton has transferred his woods to Kowloon Bowling Green Club, of which he is current Vice-President.

Dr. Atienza has, I believe, thrown in his lot with K. F. C., whilst such promising players as B. D. Evans, who did very well last season, and P. C. Morgan, erstwhile H. K. F. C. player, should add strength to the teams.

I hear that most of the old hands at Kowloon Tong will be available and Harry Gittins should be able to lay his hands on quite as good a set of players as he had last season. Sam Houghton will not be available, however, nor will W. C. Simpson: but the youngsters who have been practising lately show good promise and should not let the club down. I see that Robbie Lee, the Cricket Interporter, will play for this club when required and as he has proved his aptitude for ball games he should do well.

Promising Novices

As regards the Third Division, three of Hong Kong Electric's regular players in Jim Lunny, Bill Stoker and C. E. Gahagan are on leave this year but some promising novices will be anxious to obtain places as the season advances. W. Macfarlane seems a familiar name in the bowls world and it may interest readers to know that this player is the son of W. Macfarlane who is skipping for Kowloon Bowling Green Club, and a nephew of Alec Macfarlane of the same club.

Kowloon Cricket Club have a dozen novices available, and should have no difficulty in putting out a more than useful team in the Third Division. I have no idea who will be appearing but from the list of those willing to play two teams above the average can be formed.

Craigengower Club have not many new players but the old players have improved with experience. Yacht Club have lost G. S. Archbutt, but plenty of the old hands like "Jimmy" Wild, A. W. Brown, George Costello, Archie Nissim, A. S. Mitchell and "Z. B. W." Hansen have rallied round and an improvement on last year may be expected—if my innocent leg-pull will be pardoned!

The Prison Officers' Club are an unknown quantity if ever there was one. Three experienced players in Arthur Jillett, Tommy Gooding and S. Hodge will form the backbone of the side.

The two former have League experience, whilst Hodge is no stranger to the game.

Of the new players, Tommy Pile, the footballer, has shown a great aptitude for the game and more than full of promise are Gowland, McCutcheon Webber and McGrath to mention a few. All are as keen as mustard!

So toss up the coin and let's get on with the game: don't forget your brown shoes and remember all those little points of etiquette and courtesy on the green which can make the game so friendly and social.

Some Don'ts!

Don't stand behind the jack—don't move when another player is bowling—don't if you are lead or second man give directions or make suggestions—and just one more don't which occurs to me—don't throw matches or cigarette ends on the green or in the ditches. I still have painful memories of picking up a lighted cigarette end which was underneath my wood!

ROYAL SUCCESS AT NEWMARKET

London, To-day.—His Majesty the King had his first win of the season, at Newmarket, when his two-year-old filly Mouzelle, starting at 11 to 2, won the Wilbraham Stakes over five furlongs, beating Mr. T. F. Blackwell's Lady Sue (9 to 4) by three-quarters of a length.

Sir Hugo Canliffe-Owen's Tumult (7 to 2), a short head away, was third.

Seventeen ran and the Royal victory was greeted with loud cheers.—Reuter.

BOWLING

COMPETITORS DEFEAT WONDERS

A most enjoyable evening was spent at the Hong Kong Bowling Alleys when the final of the Ewo Bowling League in which the Competitors beat the Hong Kong Wonders by 243 points, yesterday.

At the end of the match, the Ewo Cup was presented to the winning captain, E. Hearther, by Mr. H. Odell on behalf of the Ewo League.

Scoring generally was not high. Hearther and J. S. Landolt each topped 800, and the former was the only man to score more than 200 in one frame.

This is the second successive time that Messrs. Hearther, Venezia, Molthen and Faggiano have won the Cup. The scores were:

I do not want to be rude, but English international football this season has been only another name for "English forward play." In all three matches, H. B. Toft, D. E. Teden, R. M. Marshall, T. F. Huskisson, and the rest of them had to bear practically the whole burden. How they did it will not be soon forgotten, and in the Welsh and Scottish matches they had their reward. But this poor back play is all frightfully disconcerting, as it has been for a few seasons now. It is grossly unfair, I think, to blame the selectors. It is all very well to say now that "A" or "B" would have done better than those who took their places. But what evidence was there that they would even probably have done so? None, in my opinion. We just have not got the backs, there's an end of it.—D. R. Gwent

Blue Peter's Success In 2,000 Guineas

London, To-day.

The two Thousand Guineas run at Newmarket yesterday over a mile resulted in a win for Blue Peter, ridden by E. Smith, by a length and a half from Admiral's Walk with Harry Wragg in the saddle. Fairstone, ridden by Beary, was placed third by three-quarter of a length.

Twenty-five ran. The betting was 5-1, 100-7, 13-2.

The weather was fine and a large crowd present. The going was light and firm.

Dispenser, Blue Peter, Romeo and Rogerstone Castle led from a good start but the former pony failed to last the strong pace and dropped back early on.

Romeo led at the halfway stage, going well, closely followed by Blue Peter, Fairstone, His Highness, Diadoque, Admiral's Walk and Hypnotist.

Romeo started to lose ground going into The Dip and Blue Peter took up the running with Fairstone, Diadoque and Admiral's Walk challenging strongly.

Admiral's Walk and Fairstone were at Blue Peter's girth halfway up the hill but Blue Peter ran on strongly.

Romeo was fourth, Diadoque fifth, Hypnotist sixth, Rogerstone Castle seventh, Atoutmatire eighth, Casanova ninth and Ramoda last.

The time was 1 minute, 40 seconds.—Reuter.

L. ROZA PEREIRA HONOURED

In recognition of his bravery in rescuing a Chinese from the harbour outside the Victoria Recreation Club on July 20, last year, Mr. Lionel Roza-Pereira, Colony cross-harbour champion, was presented with a bronze medallion and parchment of the Royal Humane Society by Sir Atholl MacGregor at the V.R.C. yesterday.

Mr. R. J. Hunt, Hon. representative of the Royal Life Saving Society, stated that at 1.30 p.m. on July 20, 1938, Roza-Pereira was about to take a swim in the Club pool when he heard shouts from outside. He went out and saw three or four others swimming to the aid of a person in difficulties. The nullah, out of which the man had been washed, was running strongly. Mr. Pereira dived in to assist. He overtook the others, but when he reached the drowning man, he had disappeared beneath the muddy waters. Mr. Pereira dived, and fortunately came in contact with the man's coat. He hauled him to the surface and assisted in taking him aboard a Naval launch. On board the launch, Mr. Pereira applied artificial respiration and made excellent progress until blood was seen oozing out of the man's mouth. He had, apparently, suffered internal injuries in his rough passage down the nullah. The man was removed to hospital.

LIFE SAVING KNOWLEDGE

"I want to stress, and stress as hard as I can," said Sir Atholl MacGregor, President of the V.R.C., the value of a knowledge of life saving. The best of swimmers is no use if he does not know how to revive a man he has saved from the water.

"Mr. Hunt has referred to Mr. Pereira as a stout swimmer. I would go further than that and refer to him as a stout-hearted swimmer."

"It is a proud moment," he concluded, "to pin to the breast of Lionel Roza-Pereira this bronze medallion, which is the highest award that the Society has to confer."

The presentation was then made and Sir Atholl called for three cheers and a "whole menagerie of tigers."

London, April 14.—Mrs. D. L. Little showed much of her old form at the Tally Ho tournament at Edgbaston yesterday, when she beat Miss A. M. Yorke by 6-1, 6-3, in the final of the women's singles, and so reversed the result of their match at Harrow last month. M. D. Deleford won the men's singles by beating C. E. PONY RACING

THE JUVENILE HEIGHT LIMIT

The effect of the height limit applied by the Pony Turf Club to juveniles is being seen this year in the greatly reduced number of rejected youngsters. The ruling lays down that two-year-olds may not race until June 1, and that they will not be accepted for registration if measuring over 14.3 hands.

As a result, a reasonable margin is left for natural development between the ages of two and three years, and juveniles have a much better chance of passing the 15-hand limit when measured for second-season racing. It is an unfortunate fact that animals rejected from P.T.C. racing on grounds of stature cannot be accepted under any other rules in England. Two years ago, however, the P.T.C. came to an arrangement with a number of foreign turf clubs, and ponies exceeding the limit can now be sent to various overseas countries. In fact, many ex-Northolt racers have gone abroad and have won many prizes.

Riders from abroad continue to make Northolt a happy hunting ground. C. E. Rose, who had considerable experience in France, Egypt, America, Syria, and Greece, has once again taken out a pony licence, and I understand that he will be riding for a few well-known owners with overseas connections. The latest arrival is H. W. Spackman, a jockey whose record in India was impressive. He started well ridden victory on Big News on the first day.

Walker The Match-Winner For R.A.F. Against Army

WINDFALL FOR V.R.C.

At the annual meeting of the Victoria Recreation Club yesterday Sir Atholl MacGregor announced that the late Mr. Thomas Meek, for whom the members had stood in respectful silence for one minute earlier, had left to the Club £1,000. This sum had not yet been received, but Sir Atholl assured members that it was coming.

Sir Atholl was supported by Messrs. D. Lyon (vice-Chairman), R. J. Hunt, G. A. Agabeg, L. Roza-Pereira, F. X. d'Almada e Castro, jr., D. F. Lopes (Hon. Secretary) and H. Hyndman (Hon. Treasurer).

Sir Atholl said that the V.R.C. was one of those happy Clubs which ran themselves. Nothing sensational ever happened, though there were the usual slight fluctuations from time to time.

The general working account of 1937 and 1938 had shown losses, but this year there was a credit balance of $1,540, a fact which showed that members were taking a really great interest in their Club.

The report and accounts were adopted.

GIFT OF $1,000

Sir Atholl said that he had not had the pleasure of knowing the late Mr. Meek, but he knew several people who had. "He must have loved this Club," he said, "and he has left it $1,000. This is not shown in the accounts, because the wheels of the law go round slowly, but I can assure you that it is coming."

A sub-Committee, he said, had been formed to consider how best that sum could be used. That Committee had not yet reported, and Sir Atholl told members that if they had any suggestions or structural proposals for the betterment of the Club, the Committee and sub-Committee would welcome them, and an extraordinary General Meeting would be called.

The deep sympathy of the Club in the death of Mr. Meek was recorded in the minutes, and an expression of gratitude for the gift he had left.

Honoraria of $300 each to the Hon. Secretary and Hon. Treasurer were carried unanimously.

J. Anderson expressed the hope that the incoming Committee would give more time in the mornings for school children to use the bath.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Sir Atholl MacGregor was re-elected Chairman, amid general acclamation.

Mr. A. O. Barretto was elected Hon. Secretary, and Mr. A. A. Guterres Hon. Treasurer.

The new Committee elected comprises:

G. A. Agabeg, O. d'Arcy, S. V. Gittins, R. J. Hunt, D. F. Lopes, D. Lyon, F. W. T. Roza, L. Roza-Pereira, and C. N. Silva.

Elusive Running Outwits Defence

London, March 31.

ROYAL AIR FORCE 18 pts. ARMY 3

The Royal Air Force beat the Army at Twickenham by a goal, a dropped goal, a penalty goal and two tries to a penalty goal. As the result of this convincing win the Royal Navy, who had already beaten yesterday's winners, retain the championship the R.A.F. finish second and the Army last.

Before the game I wrote that unless the newcomers to the R.A.F. side brought about a surprise or Walker played one of his most baffling games, says a writer in the "Daily Telegraph," the greater experience of the Army would prevail. Well, Walker played one of the best games of his career, the newcomers in Mahoney and Cobden both ran with fine spirit, and the Army experience availed them nothing at all.

The further the game went the greater power Walker became. He always kicked soundly; but after half-time he ran in his most elusive fashion, dropped the cleverest of goals, and scored a try under the posts with a right-left-right swerve which left the Army defence doing strange things with their feet and arms.

Balmforth, besides serving Walker well, got through any amount of work on his own, some of his saving being as solid as it was courageous. Between them they so overshadowed the opposing pair, of whom Chambers was a good deal the better, that the Army centres, behind a slow-heeling pack spent an uncomfortably crowded afternoon, and were never allowed to develop any attack in which their wings had reasonable chances of scoring.

The Army midfield defence was outstanding in a game in which the tackling had all the traditional ferocity. No Services game could ever be dull while people set about each other in that manner! But why the Army captain waited until five minutes from the end before moving Leyland to stand-off half will always remain for me like the "Marie Celeste," the Indian rope trick and the crossword on Saturdays. Five minutes after the start would not have been too soon.

Admittedly the Army half-backs were handicapped by the tortuous heeling of a curiously docile pack, who gave me the impression of being stale from the effects of too much football of an inferior quality. Packing 3-4-1, the Army got the ball in all seven times more than their opponents in the tight, besides being rather cleverer in the loose scrummaging, but they had neither the fire nor the fury in the open. Certainly they never looked capable of packing 3-2-3, wheeling and taking charge of the game when the outside weakness became apparent.

The R.A.F. forwards made a good showing, the two big men, Irens and Roncoroni, delighting in the hand-to-hand encounters, and the back row, with Gascoigne particularly good, carrying out a campaign of insidious infiltration, in the course of which they mercilessly strangled any attempts at ingenuity or originality in a back division already labouring in the fell clutch of circumstance.

Airmen Penalised

Both sides went off at top speed, but at the end of six minutes typical tear-away Services Rugby, the R.A.F. were penalised for a scrummage infringement, and Arengo-Jones banged over a goal.

Already we had seen some splendid tackling by Harrison, Leyland and Ibbitson, several attempted moves by the R.A.F. three-quarters being given very short shrift. Now came a formidable R.A.F. rush which looked really dangerous until Sayers cleared with a lot of R.A.F. half-backs. Parsons added it, but strangely enough, did not claim a mark.

Mahoney, who has tremendous accleration, next made a strong run before sending over a cross-kick. Rogers gathered it, found Irens inside him to take his pass, and there were critically crowded moments on the line before the Army forced their way out. They came to the attack with a clever kick to touch near the flag by Sayers, who played his fast slashing game, mixing things readily with anyone willing to go for him. Arengo-Jones and Cary were his best accomplices.

Irens Levels Scores

Relief came when Cobden started a move, and Gascoigne carried on with a dribble. With a quarter of an hour gone, Irens kicked a good penalty goal, from an angle 30 yards out, to put the R.A.F. level.

That was all the scoring in a first half of splendid vigour and stern tackling. We saw Mahoney in action again, some powerful, accurate kicking by Walker, the Army forwards striving to assert themselves and taking scrums for line-outs, Ibbitson, Sayers and Bevis in a move, a timely clearance by Bevis, Cary bursting through but losing the ball, and two good bits of bustling work by Bobden. It was apparent that unless changes were made in the Army midfield players, or the pack endeavoured to keep the ball and win the game themselves, the R.A.F. had a good chance of winning.

At any rate, it was difficult to see the Army scoring, while with Rogers and Garvin behind, Walker and fast wings outside them, there were plenty of possibilities about the R.A.F. attack.

Holmes Injured

With five minutes of the second half gone, Walker put a deft punt over the line away to the right, and Rogers got the touch-down in a scramble during which Holmes was hurt, leaving the field for five minutes. Sayers going to full-back, Irens failed with the kick, but four minutes later Gascoigne, following up fast, as ever, caught Ibbitson, and from the ensuing scrummaging, Balmforth found Walker. The stand-off swung himself out of a half-tackle, and from about 30 yards out dropped a perfect goal.

Up to that point it had been anybody's game, but now there was no holding the R.A.F. The forwards smashed away at the opposing eight. Balmforth kept Walker moving with good passes besides making some smart breakaways, and the whole line were filled with enterprise. With all due deference to the champions, I think that the R.A.F. at this period played the best football of the season's series.

With 10 minutes to go Cobden rounded off some passing with the burst that those of us who had seen him before were awaiting. He rounded Ford,

EASTERN A.A. FOOTBALL TEAM RETURNS

The Eastern Athletic Association team returned to the Colony by the s.s. Helekon this morning after a very successful tour in Haiphong and Saigon.

Considerable anxiety was felt by relatives when it was stated in the Chinese papers that the Helekon had been detained by Japanese on its way to Hong Kong.

They will play their decisive game against the Royal Navy for the runners-up position of the First Division on Saturday at Caroline Hill.

BOXING

Kid Berg's New Title

Hamilton (Bermuda), April 14.—Kid Berg, the British boxer, won the welter-weight championship of Bermuda here last night when he beat Marine Bunker of H.M.S. Orion, who failed to come up for the ninth round.

Bunker, who is middle-weight champion of the West Indies Squadron, was a substitute for Johnny Semas, the local champion, who cried off, and thus forfeited his title.

Berg tore into his man from the start, and floored him three times in the third round. Bunker was again on the floor from a left to the body in the eighth round, but the bell saved him. Badly hurt and outclassed, Bunker was unable to continue, and Berg was awarded the fight.

Berg weighed 10 stone 5 lbs., and his opponent 10 stone 8 lbs. —Press Association.

handed-off Holmes, and scored, but too far put for Irens to convert.

Right on "no-side" Walker got his memorable try: which Cobden had no difficulty in converting.

CUE-BIDDING TO SLAM

♣ 8 7 3
♠ A K Q 6 2

♣ A Q 8 7 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	2♠	3♠	Pass
4♠	Pass	4♥	Pass
5♠	Pass	5♠	Pass
6♠	Pass	6♠	Pass

To-day's hand, taken from one of the recent Cavendish Club Duplicates, is a good example of The Four Aces Slam bidding method. South's hand would be a sound opening bid without the King of spades. Hence, when his partner gave him a jump raise, he invited a Slam in accordance with the Rule of the Ace and the King. When North accepted by his bid of four hearts, South bit clubs once more in order to give his partner a chance to indicate either the Ace of diamonds or the King of clubs. North, having the King of clubs, bid six spades, whereupon South went to six spades, which of course was a laydown.

You were Merwin Maier's partner yesterday and held:

♠ Q 10 9 7 6 4
♥ x x x
♦ x x x
♣ x x

The bidding:

Maier	Burnatins	You	Schenken
1♠	1♠	(?)

ANSWER: Your correct bid is to pass. If you double, the chances are that Mr. Schenken will rescue. Then if your partner doubles the rescue bid, you will be afraid to leave it in, but at the same time you have no place to take it out. However, if Mr. Maier can now double one spade for takeout, you will of course leave it in.

Score 100% for pass, 80% for double, 0 for any other bid.

Question No. 84

However Schenken is your partner. You are the dealer and hold:

♠ Q x x
♥ x x x
♦ A K x x
♣ A K J x

The bidding:

You	Maier	Schenken	Burnatins
1♠	Pass	1♠	Pass

What do you bid? (Answer Monday.)

AT THE KING'S — "Always Good-bye". Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall and Ian Hunter in a vivid and gripping drama of conflicting loves, superbly staged and powerfully portrayed. A fine supporting cast includes Cesar Romero, Lynn Bari, Billie Barnes, Franklyn Pangborn, Ben Welden and Hollywood's latest child star, little Johnny Russell.

AT THE STAR — "This Is The Life". Little Jane Withers, a stage prodigy, is cruelly ill-treated by the couple who are capitalizing on her talents, forcing her to run away with a young man falsely accused of theft.

AT THE CATHAY — "Josette". Papa wants to marry Josette, so his two big sons come to the rescue, with the result of one of the season's gayest musical romances with Don Ameche, Simon Simone, Robert Young, Bert Lahr, John Davis, Paul Hurst and William Collier, sr.

AT THE QUEEN'S — "The Great Man Votes". with John Barrymore, Peter Holden, Virginia Weidler and Katharine Alexander. Peter Holden and Virginia Weidler have the roles of the two youngsters, and Luis Alberni, Donald MacBride, Katharine Alexander, Granville Bates and J. M. Kerrigan are prominently cast in this unusual offering.
